Brown's Seven Aides Approved At Ohio State

Output Of Aircraft Speeds Up

1,000 Planes Turned Off Lines During Last Month

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—American military aircraft production in January soared to a record high of 1,000 airplanes, National Defense officials revealed today.

At least 500 of these planes will be delivered to the British government under President Roosevelt's announced policy of "rule-of-thumb" in determining Anglo-American priorities.

Billions of dollars that are being poured into the aviation industry slowly are showing the desired result of stimulated production. In December the rate of competition of military airplanes was in the neighborhood of 800. In November, when Defense Director William S. Knudsen reported production was 30 percent behind schedule, the output was 700 military aircraft.

Authoritative government aviation sources forecast February military airplane production would reach about 1,250, with the rate of output accelerating substantially during the spring months.

Ration Unrevealed

Officials refused to disclose how many of the 1,000 planes turned out in January were bombers. They reported, however, that about 450 were combat types and 550 were training planes. This has been the approximate construction ratio in previous months.

In addition to the output of military planes, American plants are continuing to roll a substantial number of commercial and private aircraft off assembly lines.

At the moment, there is considerable controversy within the administration over the ultimate disposition of the commercial planes. The Army wants to use them for military purposes. The Navy and the Civil Aeronautics Authority are opposing such a step, the Navy basing its opposition on its desire to see that Pan American Airways gets more planes for trans-oceanic and Latin-American operations.

Value Determined

Meanwhile, other aviation sources disclosed that deliveries of the Martin light bomber to the British have reached the rate of "several a day." These airplanes are heavily armored, capable of a 300 mile per hour speed, and have proved their value to the British during recent war operations in the Mediterranean.

Secretary of the Navy Knox said he was "highly gratified" by the increase in plane deliveries to the Navy.

Three Massillon Assistants, Two Holdovers, Two New Men Employed

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—Approval of the youngest coaching staff to ever be in charge of football at Ohio State University was voted unanimously this afternoon by the university Athletic Board after Paul (Bucky) Brown, only 32 himself, announced selection of his seven aides.

Brown's choices include: Hugh McGranahan, 39, Carroll Widdoes, 36, and Fred Heisler, 26, his assistants in turning out Massillon High School's "wonder" teams; Eddie Blicke, 36, and Fritz Mackey, 37, who served as assistants under Francis A. Schmidt, recently resigned Buck mentor; Paul Bixler, 34, a member of the Colgate University staff, and Trevor Rees, 27, coach at Cleveland Shaw High School and a former end at Ohio State.

Ernie Godfrey, line coach under Schmidt, who was announced earlier in the week as a possible aide to the new Buckeye coach, was not included in the staff.

Brown declared that he would assume responsibility for the entire staff. "These selections are my own," he said, "and I ask the public to wait for results before passing judgment."

According to general belief, McGranahan will coach the guards and centers, Widdoes the blockers, Heisler and Rees the freshmen, Blicke and reserves, Mackey the tackles, and Bixler the ends and wing backs. Brown will handle the ball carriers himself.

Rees, a native of Dover, O., is a nephew of Ernie Godfrey. After graduation from Ohio State, he brought Cleveland Shaw out of the doldrums of a steady string of defeats into one of the powers in the Cleveland area.

WINANT CHOSEN FOR KENNEDY'S POST IN BRITAIN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—President Roosevelt this afternoon asked the senate to confirm John G. Winant of New Hampshire, a Republican, as the new United States ambassador to Great Britain.

Winant, who is now director of the International Labor Office, is a former governor of his home state. He will succeed Joseph P. Kennedy, who resigned, at the Court of St. James. It was expected the senate would confirm his nomination without any particular objection.

Although a Republican, the 51-year-old Winant supported President Roosevelt for reelection in both 1936 and 1940. Prior to the 1936 conventions, he was mentioned by some of his friends as a possible G. O. P. presidential candidate. Mr. Roosevelt, however, brought him to Washington to become first chairman of the Social Security Board and organize that far-flung agency.

Clean shaven, Winant has been described as resembling Abraham Lincoln in physique. He is lank-limbed and sparing of speech. He preserves a dry, unsmiling attitude characterized by two habits—chair-teetering and a constantly futile attempt to keep a black forelock off his forehead.

CHURCHMAN SCORES TWO BOOKS AS "OFFENSIVE"

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6—Two current best-selling novels—"Kitty Foyle" by Christopher Morley and "For Whom the Bells Toll" by Ernest Hemingway—today were denounced as "offensive and obscene" by a spokesman for the Episcopal Church in Pennsylvania.

The books were criticized in a stinging editorial written by the Rev. George Copeland, editor-in-chief of the Church News, official organ. Episcopal authorities pointed out that the church has no "index" of forbidden books, which are a matter of "personal conscience."

KNOX'S PLANE CARRIES YOUTH, F. D. R.'S DOCTOR TREATS HIM FOR INJURY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Flown 1600 miles on a mercy flight in Navy Secretary Knox's personal airplane and then treated by President Roosevelt's personal physician, Second Class Seaman Leonard H. Yates, who enlisted in the navy at Richmond, Va., a year ago, was reported recovering in Naval Hospital today.

Yates was severely injured when he was struck by a plane propeller aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp in the Atlantic. The commanding officer of the ship requested aid, and Knox's Lockheed plane was sent for the injured sailor. On arrival in Washington he was treated for head and eye injuries by Rear Admiral R. T. McIntire, surgeon general of the navy and physician to President Roosevelt.

Berlin's Bombers Raid Four Areas In England; Damage Reported Slight

RAF Reports Large Scale Offensive Successful; Loss Toll Differs

LONDON, Feb. 6—German bombers returned to the attack today with widespread raids involving at least four areas in England.

Nazi planes were reported over the eastern midlands, East Anglia, and two northeast English coast towns.

German raiders bombed southeast England and the London area during the night in retaliation for savage British attacks from Calais to Boulogne, but the Air Ministry announced today that the Nazis had inflicted relatively slight damage.

"During the early part of the night," said an official communique, "bombs were dropped on east and southeast England and the London area."

"The raids were on a small scale and damage was not heavy. There were few casualties."

Anglo-German aerial warfare leaped to new fury with tremendous RAF raids that covered the French coast from Calais to Boulogne with huge red glare from bomb-kindled fires.

The latest British attacks were described as the most damaging daylight assaults yet inflicted on the German bases and invasion ports along the coast.

Pillars of Flame Seen

Above Calais, Boulogne and Bordeaux the fires sent up pillars of flame and smoke as high as 9,000 feet after the British attacks, which precipitated furious aerial combats over the English Channel.

The British announced seven German planes had been shot down and that five British craft were missing.

The RAF attacks up and down the French coast were carried out during the daylight hours of yesterday.

European Bulletins

ROME—Huge placards were posted in the center of Rome today, ridiculing King George VI of Britain. They read: "George VI. King of the Jews."

LONDON—The British trawler Lady Philomena yesterday shot down a dive-bomber which was attacking a shipping convoy off the southeast coast of Britain, the admiralty announced today. No ships in the convoy were lost or damaged but another escorting trawler, the Turnalline, was sunk.

NEW YORK—The exiled Belgian government today held a writ of attachment for $260,000,000 against assets of the Bank of France in this country to cover the loss of Belgian gold which it charged the French had yielded to the Nazi overlords of conquered Belgium.

AUTOISTS WARNED ABOUT PARKING ON MAIN STREET

Traffic Officer Miller Fissell, Thursday, warned motorists against overtime double parking on West Main Street.

During the last week several tickets have been issued to motorists who have left their cars double parked for more than ten minutes. Car owners also are abusing parking privileges by failing to park next to the curb when there is adequate space and by parking on the wrong side of the street, Patrolman Fissell said.

Lease-Lend Bill's House Test Nears

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Administration forces today won the first major test in the lease-lend bill fight when the House rejected, 206 to 145, a substitute measure which would have merely provided a $2,000,000 loan or gift to nations battling the axis powers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Democratic members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee today voted to accept two more modifying amendments to the lease-lend bill as the House readied itself for a free-for-all floor battle over revision of the measure.

The amendments provide for a congressional declaration against carrying goods to England in American ships, and a time limit on the power of the President to obligate the government on contracts for which congress has not appropriated money.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—President Roosevelt faced his first great test of strength in the new 77th congress today as the House prepared to vote on crucial amendments to the "lease-lend" British aid bill.

Leaders of both sides in the struggle girded themselves for a bitter, perhaps uproarious battle, over amendments designed to strip the bill of vast powers for the President and to tighten the hold of congress on the nation's purse strings.

Despite confidence of administration leaders, they were still considering the making of further concessions in the form of modifying amendments in the hope of building up congressional unity.

The House readied itself for the battle after three days of debate, during which the "all out" British aid measure was praised as a safeguard of democracy and assailed as a bill leading America directly into the maelstrom of war on two continents.

On the one hand, Rep. Bloom (D) N. Y., chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, directed the strategy of administration forces seeking to pass the bill by Friday night.

Fish Versus Bloom

Standing against him is Rep. Fish (R) N. Y., foe of war, leading the opposition seeking to radically modify the bill.

Proposed committee amendments include a time limit until June 30, 1943, prohibition of navy convoys, requirement of the President to consult Army and Navy chiefs before transferring any defense articles, and to report to congress on all transactions every 90 days.

Only a pace behind the scenes is Speaker Rayburn, confidant of Mr. Roosevelt, who helped frame the "lease-lend" bill and who is the supreme director of administration forces.

Rayburn confidently predicted final passage of the measure by 100 votes. Foes of the measure, including Minority Leader Martin, generally conceded the measure will pass.

A rising tide of sentiment for further limitations on the measure, both to put a "ceiling" on expenditures and to make it plain that no power is given the President to involve the nation in war, threatened to force concessions even beyond administration desires.

With Fish declaring that a canvass of the House indicates strong probability of many important amendments being adopted, Bloom said that "we are willing to consider all reasonable amendments."

A group of southern Democrats led a fight for an amendment which would deny Mr. Roosevelt power to send merchant ships into the war zones, where they said the boats might be sunk and thus perhaps bring about war.

"Ceiling" Urged

Many northern Democrats, stung by assertion of foes that the "sky is the limit" under the bill, urged a "ceiling" of $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 on appropriations.

Rep. Coffee (D) Neb., a leader of a Democratic opposition bloc, conceded defeat, declaring that "I don't believe more than 20 to 25 Democrats will vote against the bill in its entirety, although there are many on the fence."

JAIL-BREAKER DELUXE TO GET CHANCE AT OHIO PEN

CINCINNATI, Feb. 6—Twenty-three-year-old Paul Westerfield, alias Masterfield, alias John Fink, who authorities stated is a jail-breaker de luxe, will be "given" the opportunity to try his talents on the cell-doors of Ohio Penitentiary.

Westerfield is credited with escaping from such notable penal institutions as San Quentin, California, the Ohio Reformatory at Mansfield, and the Cincinnati jail cells in the city hall. He assertedly fashions very workable keys from pieces of tin.

The youth was sentenced to three separate penitentiary terms when he pleaded guilty to charges of housebreaking, auto stealing, and carrying concealed weapons.

NEGOTIATION IS URGED

Mediated Peace Preferred To Complete Victory For Either Side

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Declaring that a British victory in Europe's war "is extremely doubtful," Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today warned congress that "regardless of how much assistance we send to England it will not be possible for American and British aviation to equal the strength of the German air force."

Col. Lindbergh, testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in opposition to President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill to aid Britain, stated that England was not "in a position to win the war" because the Nazis have forged "almost a semi-circle" around the British Isles. He cautioned against any attempt to "stretch the American neck clear across the Atlantic."

He stated that this country should, instead, concentrate on building up national defense, which, he said, would be depleted by aid to England. He pointed out that "we have sent most" of the planes produced in the U. S. abroad while "our own air forces are in deplorable condition for lack of modern equipment."

Peace Plea Voiced

The famous flyer, who also appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee two weeks ago, again pleaded for "negotiated peace in Europe."

"An English victory, if it were possible at all, would necessitate years of war and an invasion of the continent of Europe," he said. "I believe this would create prostration, famine, and disease in Europe—and probably in America—such as the whole world has never experienced before. This is why I say I prefer a negotiated peace to a complete victory by either side."

He argued that there was no danger of invasion from abroad now—but the danger is "here at home" by congress surrendering its powers to President Roosevelt. However, he said, that if the U. S. backs an England that loses the war, "there may be danger of invasion," and the responsibility, he said, (Continued on Page Eight)

GERMANS SCORE WILLKIE STAND AND STATEMENT

BERLIN, Feb. 6—Wendell L. Willkie's direct appeal to the German people, in which he scored the German government's "lust for power," today evoked disdainful comments in authoritative Nazi quarters.

The former American presidential candidate was unduly influenced by the British in the visit to England which he has just ended, according to the Germans.

"We can have only disdain for a man who hasn't enough character to form his own convictions," authoritative circles said.

"Willkie was a willing tool in the hands of the British."

Referring to Willkie's proud mention of his own German ancestry, these sources added: "No doubt he will again find an opportunity in the future to refer to his family antecedents in an opposite manner."

"His so-called appeal to the German people is not worthy of comment."

AUTO DEALER GRABBED

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—Stacey Lamb, 53-year-old Columbus automobile salesman, has been released in Indianapolis by a kidnaper who forced him to drive to the Indiana city where the automobile used in the "demonstration ride" was stolen, the state highway patrol reported today.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—Members of the House went on record today in a resolution assuring Ohioans they no longer would "violate the law" by keeping state property turned over to them for use while they are in office.

The resolution specified that copies of the general code, valued at $45 each, would remain the property of the state. Thus, if the volumes are not returned, legislators could be prosecuted for taking state property.

The most bitter debate of the session developed over the resolution, with some expressing resentment at the implication that legislators would "take" anything, while others contended that lawmakers have been known to sell the books.

"The fact that the law has been winked at in the past about these codes should not influence us now and we should adopt this resolution," said Rep. Radcliff (R-Pickaway).

The resolution finally was adopted by a vote of 81 to 44.

The famous flyer, who also appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee two weeks ago, again pleaded for "negotiated peace in Europe."

"An English victory, if it were possible at all, would necessitate years of war and an invasion of the continent of Europe," he said. "I believe this would create prostration, famine, and disease in Europe—and probably in America—such as the whole world has never experienced before. This is why I say I prefer a negotiated peace to a complete victory by either side."

He argued that there was no danger of invasion from abroad now—but the danger is "here at home" by congress surrendering its powers to President Roosevelt. However, he said, that if the U. S. backs an England that loses the war, "there may be danger of invasion," and the responsibility, he said, "is on the American people."

GERMANS SCORE WILLKIE STAND AND STATEMENT

BERLIN, Feb. 6—Wendell L. Willkie's direct appeal to the German people, in which he scored the German government's "lust for power," today evoked dislaid comments in authoritative Nazi quarters.

The former American presidential candidate was unduly influenced by the British in the visit to England which he has just ended, according to the Germans.

"We can have only disdain for a man who hasn't enough character to form his own convictions," authoritative circles said.

"Willkie was a willing tool in the hands of the British."

Referring to Willkie's proud mention of his own German ancestry, these sources added:

"No doubt he will again find an opportunity in the future to refer to his family antecedents in an opposite manner."

"His so-called appeal to the German people is not worthy of comment."

AUTO DEALER GRABBED

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—Stacey Lamb, 53-year-old Columbus automobile salesman, has been released in Indianapolis by a kidnaper who forced him to drive to the Indiana city where the automobile used in the "demonstration ride," was stolen, the state highway patrol reported today.

Council Moves To Lower Street Lighting Expense

Utility Company Invited To Provide Figures For Discussion

PLANT SALARIES FIXED

Building And Plumbing Code Submitted For Consideration

Taking another step in its economy program, City Council voted Wednesday evening to meet next Wednesday with officials of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company to discuss measures for reducing cost of city street lighting.

City Solicitor Joe Adkins will ask light company officials to appear at the meeting with figures showing present costs of street lighting and the estimated amount that might be saved by reducing all the lights in the city to 100 watts.

There are about 140 400-watt light now on city streets which might be reduced, councilmen believe, with a marked saving in the amount of current consumed. A new-type 100-watt bulb will provide as much light as the present 200 or 250 watt bulbs, it is believed.

Wednesday night's action followed a $3,000 slash in the 1941 street lighting appropriation, the largest cut taken by any item in the general fund appropriations.

Councilmen sent the sewage disposal rate ordinance, containing rates to be charged to Circleville industries, back to the committee of the whole after officials of certain industries protested the terms of the ordinance. The ordinance will be considered at the next regular meeting.

Salaries Established

Salaries for employees at the disposal plant were set by an ordinance passed at the meeting. The ordinance provides a salary for the superintendent of $150 a month until July 1, 1941, when the amount is to be raised to $175, and fixes the salaries of the four operators of the plant at $100 until July 1, when they are to receive a $10 a month raise.

A building and plumbing code, recommended by the Circleville Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis and the Rotary club, was presented to council and referred to the committee of the whole. No definite terms for the code have yet been established.

Third Ward Councilman G. G. Groom submitted his resignation to Council, his work out of the city preventing him from attending the council session. No person has been selected to take his place.

Ordinance Read Again

The ordinance containing opening and closing hours for Circleville liquor establishments was given its second reading. There was no discussion on the ordinance.

Collections for Berger Hospital during the month of January totaled $1,481.80, a report submitted to Council by Safety Director Karl Herrmann indicated. Mayor William Cady's report for January showed total collections to be $400.40, with $30 collected for fines, $17.40 for fees and $353 for bonds.

Councilman Frank Lynch, who has been suffering from an attack of influenza, was excused from the meeting.

HEAD OF GIRLS' SCHOOL TO BE OUSTED MARCH 1

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6 — The ouster of Mrs. Rose Beatty, whose administration as superintendent of the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware has been under fire for more than a year, was set today for March 1 following two conferences between her and State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood.

Sherwood declared that "an understanding has been reached whereby Mrs. Beatty will remain at the school to complete work which is now in progress. By March 1, Mrs. Beatty will have completed this work, and will be given a vacation and later retired from the superintendency."

The director said that he had no one in mind to succeed Mrs. Beatty, but that he might decide on a successor before March 1. In the meantime, he said, a member of the staff would take over the duties temporarily.

COMMISSIONERS IN DEBATE OVER INSPECTION FEE

Pledge Made To Assembly
In 1937 Recalled By
Elyria Official

SOME ACTIONS OPPOSED

Bricker Cites Necessity
Of Economy In Varied
Ohio Departments

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—Charged by its president with violating its pledge to the 1937 Ohio General Assembly, the Ohio County Commissioners' Association today was threatened with an open split in its ranks over the right of its members to collect fees for ditch inspections.

Oscar E. Dunn, of Elyria, president of the association, threatened at the opening session of the annual convention to personally call on the legislature to reduce the commissioners' salaries unless the association stands behind its promises.

In its successful fight for salary increases in 1937, the association agreed to call on the legislature later to abolish the ditch inspection fees. Commissioners now receive $5 per inspection, with a $500 maximum annually.

Pandemonium broke out when Dunn called on the association to make good on its agreement. When opponents of the measure, including many members who were not commissioners in 1937 and hence felt they were not bound by the association's pledge, appeared to have a majority, Dunn issued his ultimatum and succeeded in delaying a vote until a later session.

Whittemore Opposed

The Association was expected to go on record against the Whittemore bill, and administration-approved measure which would reduce the amount of motor vehicle license tax money received by the counties and increase the grants to municipalities.

Another resolution demanded an increase in the allotment of sales tax monies to the local subdivisions from $12,000,000 to $16,000,000 annually.

Governor Bricker, addressing last night's session, asserted that it was "imperative today that our various divisions of government save money, because of the federal government is going to need more and more for defense purposes."

Highway Director Hal G. Sours also touched on the defense topic when he pointed out that in building military highways the state was constructing "something which will serve us equally well in time of peace."

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

IN PRAISE OF REPUBLICS

In discussing dictatorships and republics, one mother writes that there seems to be a certain glamour about dictators that has a peculiar appeal to youth. She expressed the hope that the case for a republic and free enterprise could be stated plainly and effectively.

In Germany it is true that Hitler has the overwhelming support of youth, but what does that prove? Actually it means little more than that they speak only German. That is all they have been taught. German youth have had no choice. The dictator has won German youth, temporarily at least, by preventing debate, by suppressing free speech, free press, free radio, free movies and a free lecture room. The system is "efficient" in a hard and brittle way, but as to the real merits of a republican form of government it proves nothing.

Actually, how "efficient" is it? Time will put it to the test as time has done before. Republics permit back-seat driving. The passengers can warn of danger. A million eyes see more than two. But when a dictator is at the wheel, deaf to advice and drunk with power, a single mistake may send a nation to its doom. And that is not efficient despite the gold braid.

One of the founders of our republic thought this problem through a century and a half ago. He said, "if all you want is a smooth running machine, an absolute monarch is the best the world has ever devised. A monarchy is like a man of war beautiful in motion, irresistible when under way, but a single hidden rock sends her to the bottom. While a republic is like a raft, always in trouble, your feet always wet, but nothing can sink her!"

I do not think this statement is gainsaid by the fact that Finland, with the population of Chicago, lost to Russia; nor Denmark, as large as two Detroit's, was submerged by Germany. France is a different story which illustrates the truth that governments are destroyed by an excess of their virtues—dictatorships by too much discipline and repression and democracies by too much freedom and neglect. Dictators are the receivers of bankrupt republics. It is becoming plain in this country that we, too, can no longer regard government as a cow to be milked, and not as a watchdog to be fed.

The paper framework of our government cannot save us. It is designed to help. But we must first save that which helps us save ourselves. We must become citizens again, not inhabitants. We must pay our way. The dead-heading and hitch-hiking days are gone.

The letters I received were larded with homely wisdom, pungent as grass roots. For example, "Life is more than a bar of soap. In a republic you vote them out; in a dictatorship you shoot them out. Free men made the best things men enjoy. Only man creates, not the state. The dictator simply organizes what free men invent. The wings of the world spread first at Kittyhawk, not Prussia. Our republic—the greatest miracle in 6000 years. Why not a one-man jury?"

And this: In a republic most of the people get many of the things they want, while in a dictatorship most of the people don't want most of the things they get. Few have the nobility of soul not to abuse omnipotent power. A dictatorship resembles its dictator; a republic, its people.

As for me, I believe republics are more efficient than dictatorships, both in human happiness and in creature comforts. A society prospers chiefly through the mutual exchange of goods and services, the division of labor. But men do best, generally what they like to do best. And no one else knows that. Conversely, men do not do well what they hate to do. "The pursuit of happiness" therefore is a real factor in efficiency.

Where men are free they follow "their natural bent". Each then does, grows or makes what he can do best, and exchanges that best for his neighbor's best. So the standard of living goes up. Freedom releases every skill. It unleashes the dynamic, restless, creative, mysterious and unpredictable human soul. It gives us Edison, Burbank, Wright, Bessemer, Pupin, Westinghouse, Fulton, Whitney, Abraham Lincoln.

But in a dictatorship square men are driven into round holes. They must fit some vast pattern. The freedom to choose their occupations is denied them. They do not what they want to do, but what they are told to do. The result is second best. In short, free men produce more than slaves.

The members of the Scioto Grange of Commercial Point will present a Rural Comedy-Drama in three acts entitled "Silas Snide from Turnip Ridge", as a closing session for the Tarlton Farmer's Institute, Community Hall, Saturday night, February 8 at 8 o'clock.

A merry fast-moving comedy of irrepressible youth, full of pep and laughter. If you miss you lose. Music by the "Woodsmen" a four piece band.

Quite a large number from here attended the Farm Bureau and Livestock Co-op meeting and banquet held in the Memorial Hall in Circleville last Saturday afternoon and night was very interesting and reports tell us it was enjoyed by all.

We are sorry to report the illness of our Postmaster of Tarlton, Charles W. Pontius, who has been quite sick for the last two weeks. We think he is improving very slowly.

The groundhog did not see his shadow last Sunday, according to old traditions, if this is the case spring is just around the corner but we advise you to keep your overcoat, mitts and ear-muffs within easy reach for a short while yet. So says Ed Fetherolf, Stringtown, Ohio.

Wayne Radcliff, Mrs. Herbert Radcliff both of Kenton, O., Mr. Jack Burgoyne of Akron were the last Wednesday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oman Dille of this valley.

COMMISSIONERS IN DEBATE OVER INSPECTION FEE

Pledge Made To Assembly
In 1937 Recalled By
Elyria Official

SOME ACTIONS OPPOSED

Bricker Cites Necessity
Of Economy In Varied
Ohio Departments

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—Charged by its president with violating its pledge to the 1937 Ohio General Assembly, the Ohio County Commissioners' Association today was threatened with an open split in its ranks over the right of its members to collect fees for ditch inspections.

Oscar E. Dunn, of Elyria, president of the association, threatened at the opening session of the annual convention to personally call on the legislature to reduce the commissioners' salaries unless the association stands behind its promises.

In its successful fight for salary increases in 1937, the association agreed to call on the legislature later to abolish the ditch inspection fees. Commissioners now receive $5 per inspection, with a $500 maximum annually.

Pandemonium broke out when Dunn called on the association to make good on its agreement. When opponents of the measure, including many members who were not commissioners in 1937 and hence felt they were not bound by the association's pledge, appeared to have a majority, Dunn issued his ultimatum and succeeded in delaying a vote until a later session.

Whittmore Opposed

The Association was expected to go on record against the Whittmore bill, and administration-approved measure which would reduce the amount of motor vehicle license tax money received by the counties and increase the grants to municipalities.

Another resolution demanded an increase in the allotment of sales tax monies to the local subdivisions from $12,000,000 to $16,000,000 annually.

Governor Bricker, addressing last night's session, asserted that it was "imperative today that our various divisions of government save money, because of the federal government is going to need more and more for defense purposes."

Highway Director Hal G. Sours also touched on the defense topic when he pointed out that in building military highways the state was constructing "something which will serve us equally well in time of peace."

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

IN PRAISE OF REPUBLICS

In discussing dictatorships and republics, one mother writes that there seems to be a certain glamour about dictators that has a peculiar appeal to youth. She expressed the hope that the case for a republic and free enterprise could be stated plainly and effectively.

In Germany it is true that Hitler has the overwhelming support of youth, but what does that prove? Actually it means little more than that they speak only German. That is all they have been taught. German youth have had no choice. The dictator has won German youth, temporarily at least, by preventing debate, by suppressing free speech, free press, free radio, free movies and a free lecture room. The system is "efficient" in a hard and brittle way, but as to the real merits of a republican form of government it proves nothing.

Actually, how "efficient" is it? Time will put it to the test as time has done before. Republics permit back-seat driving. The passengers can warn of danger. A million eyes see more than two. But when a dictator is at the wheel, deaf to advice and drunk with power, a single mistake may send a nation to its doom. And that is not efficient despite the gold braid.

One of the founders of our republic thought this problem through a century ago. He said, "If all you want is a smooth running machine, an absolute monarch is the best the world has ever devised. A monarchy is like a man of war beautiful in motion, irresistible when under way, but a single hidden rock sends her to the bottom. While a republic is like a raft, always in trouble, your feet always wet, but nothing can sink her!"

I do not think this statement is gainsaid by the fact that Finland, with the population of Chicago, lost to Russia; nor Denmark, as large as two Detroit's, was submerged by Germany. France is a different story which illustrates the truth that governments are destroyed by an excess of their virtues — dictatorships by too much discipline and repression and democracies by too much freedom and neglect. SMALL NATIONS READY TO SEEK FREEDOM AGAIN

Rotary Speaker Declares
That Minority Groups
Reverse Independence

ALL AWAITING CHANCE

Conditions In European
Territory Discussed
For Rotarians

Dr. Pierre Lejins, third feature on the Rotary Club's Institute of International Understanding, pleased two audiences Wednesday when he visited the high school in the afternoon and addressed an adult group in the evening in the high school social room.

The fourth number of the series will be offered next week.

Dr. Lejins dwelt at length on the plight of Europe's smaller nations, declaring that although they were forced into subjugation for the time being that all respected their independence and were waiting for an opportunity to regain it.

"Their doctrine at present is 'give in but not give up,'" the speaker said.

He declared that they retain their customs although under the watchful eye of the dictators.

Mr. Lejins, a native of Moscow but educated in Latvia, said that German people idolized Hitler because of his successes. "A few reversals for Der Fuehrer," Mr. Lejins said, "would tear down his popularity."

Most interesting part of Dr. Lejins' talk was his description of the condition and feeling of the German people. Although he stated he spent only one night and one morning in Berlin he had a fairly good picture of the city proper having had to travel from the railroad station to a friend's house, where he spent the night and then to the airport the next morning.

Saw Little Damage

According to Dr. Lejins, Berlin during the present war, up to October 19th, had suffered little damage from bombing, in his trips through the city he saw only one or two houses injured by bombs. The main difficulty in Berlin was the number of taxis. He had a very hard time obtaining transportation and at times had to wait two hours for a cab. The food appeared to be scarce although the people do not realize it is. He stated he and his wife had eggs for breakfast but his German friends did not, explaining they had plenty, for the rationing permitted them to each have six eggs a month. He had no meat while in Germany being there on "meatless days."

The explanation offered by the government for the bombing of Berlin is, he explained, that rich Canadian girls aged 16 to 18, who, for want of anything else to do, fly over the city dropping the bombs, with no system at all. The government "offers proof of this" in having shot down several of the "girls" and talking to them in the hospital.

Only serious damage he noticed in Germany was the last airport he visited. The airport had been almost completely destroyed.

Swedes Are Pro-British

In Sweden the people are strictly pro-British and are ever in terror of an invasion from either Russia or Germany. The troops, he states, are poorly trained and inefficient. Dr. Lejins was forced to spend two months in Stockholm, Sweden, waiting for his passage to America to be arranged.

In telling how he arranged his trip, he stated, first one must have a country where he will be

EX-DEPUTY ENTERS PEN IN EMBEZZLEMENT CASE

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—Willis A. Wingert, former Mahoning County chief deputy sheriff, was a prisoner in Ohio Penitentiary today after making the trip down from Youngstown without a guard.

When he was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence for embezzlement, Wingert asked and received permission to come to Columbus without a guard. He caused a brief flurry of excitement at the prison when his bus was late and he failed to arrive until two hours after his scheduled time for admittance.

Wingert was sentenced a month ago for mis-using office funds. He was granted four weeks to place his affairs in order.

SINGLE ROAD IN STATE CLOSED BY HIGH WATER

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—With the exception of Route 279 in Jackson County, closed a mile west of Oak Hill by three feet of water, all roads in the state were open today, the highway department reported.

However, light sleet and rain were reported in the vicinity of Lima, Findlay, Defiance, Paulding, Van Wert, Kenton, Ottawa, Waukegon, Fremont, Marion and Marysville. Cinder crews were working, but extreme caution was urged in affected areas.

Temperatures throughout the state this morning ranged from 28 to 38 degrees.

ILLNESS BREAKS BOY'S CLASS ATTENDANCE MARK

Junior Stout, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stout of near South Bloomfield, is suffering from measles. The illness has forced him to miss school the first time for eight years. He attends the South Bloomfield building.

permitted to stay permanently, then he can obtain permits to enter other countries which he needs to pass through to get to his destination. To obtain permission to pass through Germany he had to wait six weeks, the other countries did not take nearly so long but it had to be proved he had some place to go outside of the country.

The condition of Spain is terrible, he said, the Civil War having ruined most of the cities and farm land and permanently injured many young people.

Flight Cost $1,700
The trip from his home in Riga, Latvia, to the United States cost Dr. Lejins and his wife, $1,700, while before the war the expense of the trip for one person had cost only $141.

POULTRY FLOCKS IN SOME AREAS SURPASS OTHERS

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—Out of 39 Ohio counties having groups of poultrymen enrolled in the Ohio profitable egg program, C. M. Ferguson, specialist in poultry husbandry, Ohio State University, reports that Huron and Jefferson County flocks led in production for the last month, with 15.44 eggs per bird for Huron and 15.4 eggs per hen for Jefferson County.

Other counties with flocks averaging 14 or more eggs per hen for the month were Licking, Trumbull, Van Wert, Hancock, Muskingum, and Madison. Mr. Ferguson says there is no better insurance for poultry profits than keeping egg production for the flock at a high level.

Egg prices over the state declined about two cents a dozen in December so poultrymen had to keep closer watch of production costs to make a profit. Producers selling direct to customers in nearby cities have an advantage because retail prices do not drop as rapidly as prices paid for eggs at the farms.

Poultrymen were paying an average of $1.70 per hundred pounds for poultry feed at the beginning of January, and they had to sell 77 eggs to pay for each 100 pounds. With egg prices declining and feed prices tending to rise, low producing flocks are likely to cost their owners money.

Poultrymen cooperating in the profitable egg program owned an average of 279 hens per farm, had total income from eggs; and poultry meat of $83.10, expended $40.16 on the flock during the month, and had $42.84 remaining above expenses. This margin of profit was obtained in a month when egg prices were considerably higher than during most of the year.

Mr. Ferguson says the worries of the poultryman at this season include temperature control and wet litter in laying houses. The specialist states that wet litter in itself is not injurious to the health of the hens. The temperature of the house and absence of drafts are more important factors in affecting egg production.

RETIRED COUNTY FARMER IS DEAD IN STOUTSVILLE

Jacob Daniel Huffer, 85, a retired Washington Township farmer, died Thursday at 3 a. m. at his home in Stoutsville. He had suffered a lengthy illness, a recent stroke proving fatal.

Mr. Huffer was a native of Amanda Township, Fairfield County.

Survivors include his widow, Harriett Coakley Huffer; two sons, Clyde L., Columbus and Earl E., Washington Township; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The body will remain at the Deffenbaugh Funeral Home, East Main Street, until Friday at 4 p. m. at which time it will be removed to the residence when private funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Maple Hill Mausoleum. Friends may view the body at the funeral home or at the residence until noon Saturday.

G-MEN, ARMY STUDYING DEATHS OF 11 IN FIRE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 6.—G-men and army officials as well as local agencies today were investigating the fire which took the lives of 11 workmen employed on National Defense orders for blankets, quilts and comforts at the factory of the New Haven Quilt and Pad Company.

They were investigating reports that the sprinkler system failed to function and that several of the victims were trapped by the closing of a fire door in the third floor room where they perish. G-men and army officials entered the investigation because a defense order was involved.

It was believed a spark in a cotton fluffing machine set off the raging blaze. All 11 victims were burned almost beyond recognition.

SMALL NATIONS READY TO SEEK FREEDOM AGAIN

Rotary Speaker Declares
That Minority Groups

ALL AWAITING CHANCE

Conditions In European
Territory Discussed
For Rotarians

Dr. Pierre Lejins, third feature on the Rotary Club's Institute of International Understanding, pleased two audiences Wednesday when he visited the high school in the afternoon and addressed an adult group in the evening in the high school social room.

The fourth number of the series will be offered next week.

Dr. Lejins dwelt at length on the plight of Europe's smaller nations, declaring that although they were forced into subjugation for the time being that all respected their independence and were waiting for an opportunity to regain it.

"Their doctrine at present is 'give in but not give up,'" the speaker said.

He declared that they retain their customs although under the watchful eye of the dictators.

Mr. Lejins, a native of Moscow but educated in Latvia, said that German people idolized Hitler because of his successes. "A few reversals for Der Fuehrer," Mr. Lejins said, "would tear down his popularity."

Most interesting part of Dr. Lejins' talk was his description of the condition and feeling of the German people. Although he stated he spent only one night and one morning in Berlin he had a fairly good picture of the city proper having had to travel from the railroad station to a friend's house, where he spent the night and then to the airport the next morning.

Saw Little Damage

According to Dr. Lejins, Berlin during the present war, up to October 19th, had suffered little damage from bombing, in his trips through the city he saw only one or two houses injured by bombs. The main difficulty in Berlin was the number of taxis. He had a very hard time obtaining transportation and at times had to wait two hours for a cab. The food appeared to be scarce although the people do not realize it is. He stated he and his wife had eggs for breakfast but his German friends did not, explaining they had plenty, for the rationing permitted them to each have six eggs a month. He had no meat while in Germany being there on "meatless days."

The explanation offered by the government for the bombing of Berlin is, he explained, that rich Canadian girls aged 16 to 18, who for want of anything else to do, fly over the city dropping the bombs, with no system at all. The government "offers proof of this" in having shot down several of the "girls" and talking to them in the hospital.

Only serious damage he noticed in Germany was the last airport he visited. The airport had been almost completely destroyed.

Swedes Are Pro-British

In Sweden the people are strictly pro-British and are ever in terror of an invasion from either Russia or Germany. The troops, he states, are poorly trained and inefficient. Dr. Lejins was forced to spend two months in Stockholm, Sweden, waiting for his passage to America to be arranged.

In telling how he arranged his trip, he stated, first one must have a country where he will be

EX-DEPUTY ENTERS PEN IN EMBEZZLEMENT CASE

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—Willis A. Wingert, former Mahoning County chief deputy sheriff, was a prisoner in Ohio Penitentiary today after making the trip down from Youngstown without a guard.

When he was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence for embezzlement, Wingert asked and received permission to come to Columbus without a guard. He caused a brief flurry of excitement at the prison when his bus was late and he failed to arrive until two hours after his scheduled time for admittance.

Wingert was sentenced a month ago for mis-using office funds. He was granted four weeks to place his affairs in order.

SINGLE ROAD IN STATE CLOSED BY HIGH WATER

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—With the exception of Route 279 in Jackson County, closed a mile west of Oak Hill by three feet of water, all roads in the state were open today, the highway department reported.

However, light sleet and rain were reported in the vicinity of Lima, Findlay, Defiance, Paulding, Van Wert, Kenton, Ottawa, Wauseon, Fremont, Marion and Marysville. Cinder crews were working, but extreme caution was urged in affected areas.

Temperatures throughout the state this morning ranged from 28 to 35 degrees.

ILLNESS BREAKS BOY'S CLASS ATTENDANCE MARK

Junior Stout, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stout of near South Bloomfield, is suffering from measles. The illness has forced him to miss school the first time for eight years. He attends the South Bloomfield building.

permitted to stay permanently, then he can obtain permits to enter other countries which he needs to pass through to get to his destination. To obtain permission to pass through Germany he had to wait six weeks, the other countries did not take nearly so long but it had to proved he had some place to go outside of the country.

The condition of Spain is terrible, he said, the Civil war having ruined most of the cities and farm land and permanently injured many young people.

Flight Cost $1,700

The trip from his home in Riga, Latvia, to the United States cost Dr. Lejins and his wife, $1,700, while before the war the expense of the trip for one person had cost only $141.

SALES TAX ACT STRIKES SNAG IN OHIO ASSEMBLY

Measure To Allocate Cash To Local Subdivisions Back In Committee

49- BILLS ARE ADDED

Radcliff Submits Statute Calling For Bureau To Codify New Laws

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6—The administration-sponsored Knepper (R-Williams) House bill to allocate $12,000,000 annually this year and next in sales tax funds for local subdivisions hit a snag today as it was sent back to the House Finance Committee for reconsideration while Democrats and Republicans battled over distribution of funds.

Recommended for passage by the committee previously, the sales tax measure was sent back to the committee at the suggestion of House Minority Leader Mason (D-Wyandot) because "several persons want to be heard on it."

At the same time, House Speaker McCulloch (R-Miami) served notice on Senate Democrats that the lower chamber would not be rushed into passing the Ward (R-Columbus) bill to appropriate $2,000,000 to reimburse municipalities for relief funds spent last year. It already has Senate approval.

The Ward bill was set for hearing when the Knepper measure was sent to the House for debate and vote, but Republican leaders said that it would have to be postponed until after the second hearing on the sales tax proposal.

Held Up as Club

Democratic leaders have insisted that the relief bill was being held up intentionally as a "club" to keep local subdivisions from protesting effectively against the relief fund measure, which allows the subdivisions the same amount of money they received in the last biennium.

"There is no disposition to stymie or to defeat Senate Bill 2 (Ward bill)," McCulloch said, "but the Republican majority is charged with formulating a program and it expects to develop it in a proper manner."

"We intend to submit Senate bill 2 to a vote, and it if the Democratic members want to vote for it and to pass it, we will pass it," House Republicans have been handicapped by the absence of Majority Leader Houston (R-Champaign) who has been ill with a severe cold and has been in bed in his Columbus hotel room since Monday.

Meanwhile, House members poured bills into the hopper in anticipation of the deadline on introduction of measures under the rules, scheduled for Monday night. The latest batch of 49 bills boosted the total in the House above the 300 mark. More than 100 additional ones have been submitted in the Senate.

Many Bills Filed

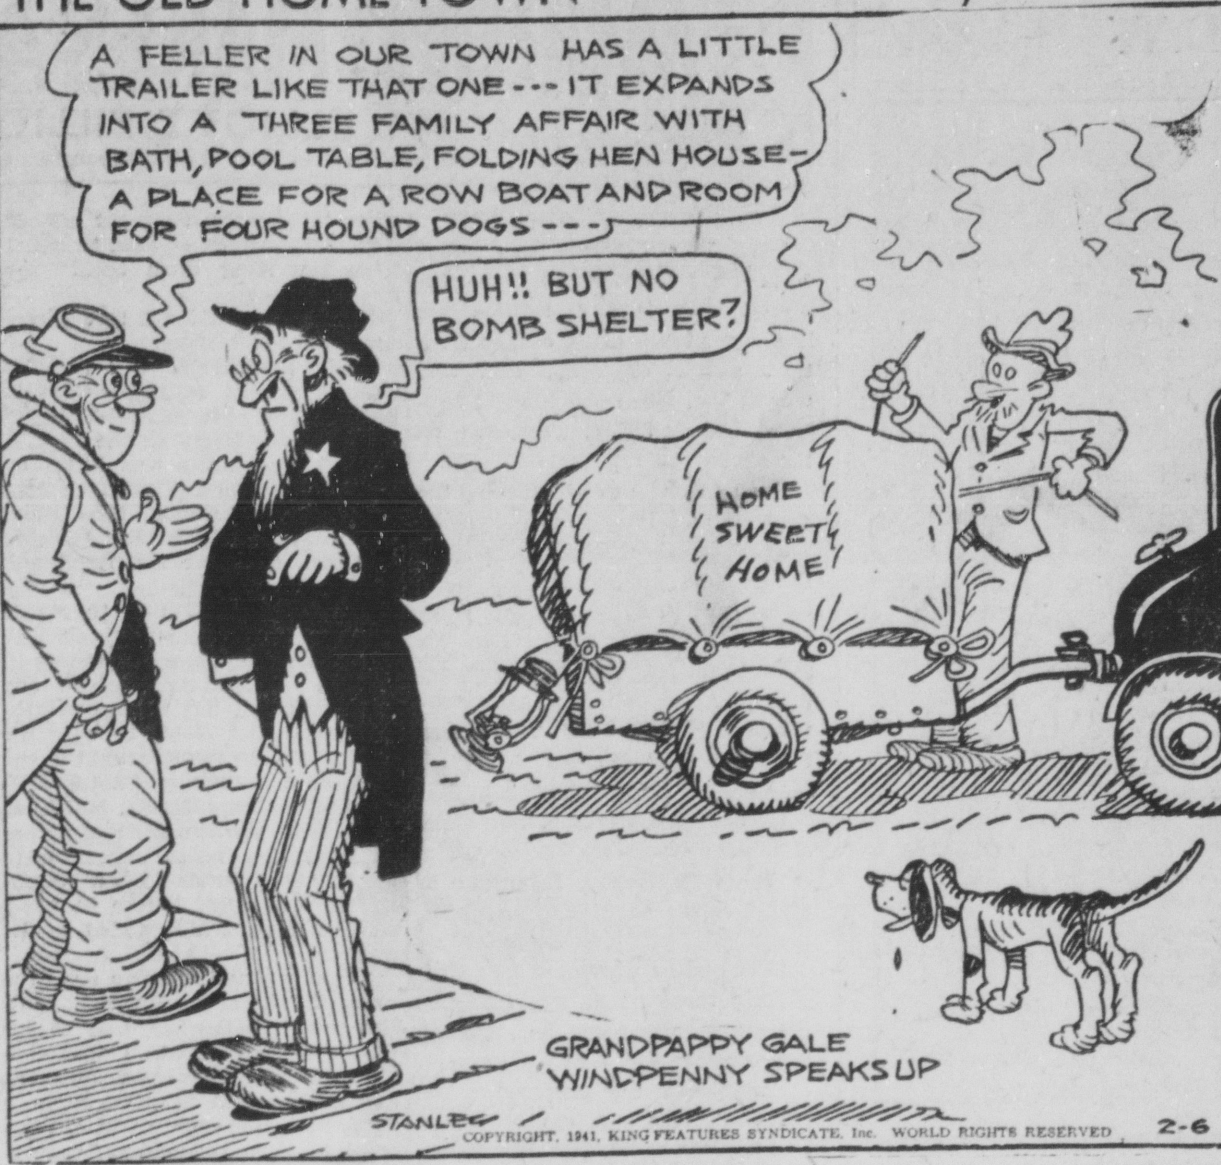

Among the newer bills introduced were the following:

Sen. Boyd (D-Cleveland) To reduce the three percent sales tax to two percent, and cut the amount allowed merchants for collecting it from three percent, to two percent of receipts.

Rep. Butz (D-Montgomery) To exempt from taxation real property owned by old age pensioners.

Sen. Kilbane (D-Cleveland) To create a state athletic commission of three men to supervise boxing and wrestling. Educational schools and colleges would be exempted. The license fee per year for anyone wishing to sponsor matches in Ohio would be:

In cities of 5000 $25; in cities below 50,000, $50; cities between 75,000 and 150,000, $75, and all cities over 150,000, $200.

Sen. Parker (D-Akron)—To change delinquent tax penalty from 10 percent to one-half of one percent per month, or a total not to exceed 6 percent per year.

Sen. Nichols (R-New Philadelphia)—To require semi-annual inspection of motor vehicles under the supervision of the state highway patrol superintendent. Inspectors would be employed to check cars and a certificate would be issued to those in perfect mechanical condition. Driving an auto without such a certificate would be unlawful.

Campaign Aid Hit

Rep. Stephenson (R-Columbiana)—To prohibit civil service employees from contributing to campaign funds and authorizing the civil service commission to dismiss merit system employees for violation of civil service laws.

Rep. Carney (D-Cuyahoga)—To provide that all receipts from sales tax in excess of $50,000,000 be distributed to municipalities to retire bonded debt within 10-year limitation.

Rep. Carney (D-Cuyahoga)—To appropriate $9,500,000 for relief each year for 1941 and 1942. Governor Bricker has indicated he hoped that appropriation would be reduced $4,000,000 over the previous biennium.

Rep. Sweeney (D-Cuyahoga)—To permit shooting of quail in Ohio under management and control.

Rep. Yoder (R-Medina)—To permit newspapers to charge the legal advertising rates for publication of notice of tax foreclosure sales.

Rep. Butts (D-Montgomery)—To increase the term of office of county central committees from two to four years.

Rep. Radcliff (R-Pickaway)—To provide for a permanent legislative bureau to codify new laws, a duty now performed by the attorney general.

Rep. Kasch (D-Summit)—To provide for sterilization of mental defectives in state institutions.

Rep. Poda (D-Summit)—To provide for 11 all-expense scholarships to state-supported universities to be given to students whose families earn less than $1000 per year.

Rep. Marshall (R-Franklin)—Submitted a house joint resolution to repeal constitutional provision establishing the office of superintendent of public works.

WILLKIE LEAVES LISBON; SPOT IN AFRICA IS NEXT

LISBON, Portugal, Feb. 6 — Speeding to the United States to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the lend-lease bill, Wendell L. Willkie was en route to New York today aboard Pan American Airways' Dixie Clipper.

Taking off at 12:19 a. m. from Lisbon, the great flying boat was scheduled to follow a new southern trans-Atlantic route, calling for the first visit of an American commercial plane to an African port.

The route leads from Lisbon to New York via Bulama, Portuguese Guinea; port of Spain, Trinidad, and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

MISSING CAR FOUND

The automobile of L. R. Swisher, West Main Street, reported stolen early Wednesday evening, was found at 1:15 a. m. Thursday, abandoned in an alley adjoining West Main Street.

opposed efforts by American Export Airlines to establish a parallel line to Lisbon.

Secret Service agents have a set of pictures of the inaugural parade, which they are studying to perfect their technique of protecting the President's car. There are more than 250 different U. S. organizations for relief to the belligerent countries.

McADOO'S DEATH

One of the last persons to confer with ex-Senator McAdoo before he died was Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior. During their two-hour luncheon the tall, erect, 77-year-old statesman appeared to be just as vigorous and youthful as ever.

McAdoo discussed plans for rallying the State of California around Roosevelt, told how he was booted for the first time in his life by the Al Smith delegation at the 1932 Chicago Convention, and how he swung the California delegation to Roosevelt, thus stampeding his nomination.

McAdoo also told how he had been elected to the U. S. Senate from California despite the criticism that he was a "carpet-bagger". This criticism he obviated by telling how his father had gone down from the Tennessee mountains on a raft via the Ohio and Mississippi and fought in General Scott's army in the Southwest. It was this army which helped liberate Texas and California, and therefore McAdoo pointed out that he could consider himself a part of California.

McAdoo and Chapman talked for a long time. The next morning at eleven, Chapman called the ex-Senator's apartment to report on a matter they had discussed. "The Senator died just thirty minutes ago," he was informed.

NOTE—Although McAdoo will be known chiefly for his vital part in the Wilson Administration, he also played a greater role in the first part of the Roosevelt Administration than most people realize. Under the agreement by which McAdoo threw the 1932 Chicago Convention to Roosevelt, he was given the right to pass up on two members of the Cabinet. The late Secretary of the Treasury Woodin was OK'd by him, and Secretary of Commerce Roper was McAdoo's man.

GOOD GREEK ADVICE

Sanest advice given to Americans of any descent or origin came the other day from George Vournas, an American citizen of Greek birth, who is vice president of the Greek-American order of AHEPA. Counseling his fellow Greek-Americans, Vournas said:

"The true American spirit can best be displayed by Americans of Greek descent by extending a helping hand to their fellow-Americans of Italian descent against prejudices which may flow from Mussolini's action.

"Those who endeavor to turn the American of Greek descent against the American of Italian descent and divide America into antagonistic racial groups instead of a unified whole must be exposed."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

One job Wendell Willkie already is signed up for when he returns is to write a book on the campaign and his British experiences.

Bobbs-Merrill has the publishing contract. . . . Another GOP leader on the dotted line for a book is Bruce Barton, who before he entered politics was best known as the author of "The Man Nobody Knows". . . . To counter the Nazi propaganda drive in Latin America, alert Nelson Rockefeller, head of the Pan-American division of the Defense Commission, has drafted Nelson Poynter, crusading editor of The St. Petersburg, Fla. Times to handle press relations. Poynter, former Scripps-Howard editor, was press director of the National Committee of Independent Voters in the 1940 campaign and won even the opposition's plaudits for his spectacular work. . . .

Administration insiders are predicting that Perry A. Fellows, mild-mannered chief engineer, will succeed the late Colonel "Pinky" Harrington as WPA boss. Harrington also was elevated from the chief engineer's post, but Fellows is not an Army man.

AUTOIST JAILED ON CHARGES OF DRUNK DRIVING

Alfred Smith, 722 South Pickaway Street, was fined $100 and costs and committed to County Jail Wednesday night on charges of driving on South Court Street when under the influence of alcohol.

Patrolman Miller Fissell, who made the arrest, said that Smith's car struck the automobile of Richard Dixon, parked in front of the Dixon residence on South Washington Street, and that Smith had failed to stop following the collision.

INSULTS FOR CONQUERORS

FRANCE seems rather quiet, and it would be easy for an outsider to get the impression that the French are reconciling themselves to German-Italian occupation. That the contrary is true may be seen from the situation in Brest, a French seaport near the southern end of the English Channel. These "Regulations for the Population" were recently published by the mayor, on orders from the Nazi district commander.

1. NATIONAL EMBLEM — The French population is forbidden to wear the tri-color emblem in any form. No object to be displayed may be decorated with the French national colors.

2. INSULTS TO ITALIANS—The inhabitants are expressly forbidden to insult the Italians and in particular the Italian vice consul in Brest, Signor Vittorio Job. If the vice consul is again insulted, the city of Brest will each time be assessed a fine of 50,000 francs.

3. THROWING OF STONES AND SUNDRY RUBBISH ON GERMAN SOLDIERS—Acts of this sort will be suppressed with extreme severity. If the culprits are not discovered, the city runs the risk of being assessed a heavy fine.

From such evidence, it doesn't seem likely that the French will ever reconcile themselves to tolerating the invaders. Life to the latter may be one endless succession of humiliating acts of resentment against the conquerors. And the same procedure is said to be followed in other invaded democracies.

LESS RICE FOR JAPS

THE Japanese people—not the Japanese statesmen—deserve American sympathy. They have been working hard for long hours on scant wages, and now their rice is to be strictly rationed. It is as if we Americans were living mainly on bread, and the government cut the bread supply.

This has to be done, the Tokyo government says, in order to maintain the huge army now under arms and meet the extraordinary naval expenses.

For military and naval costs there will be new bond issues. The people have been bled, for the militarists' adventures in China and elsewhere, until the national debt is something nobody talks about any more. It isn't likely ever to be paid.

Still the Tokyo militarists and navalists dream of conquering Asia and the East Indies and the Philippines and driving Britain and America out of the western Pacific. "VOTE LIKE AMERICANS"

WASHINGTON — Republican House leader Joe Martin warily avoided committing himself on the lend-lease armament bill at the GOP caucus. Here are the instructions he gave his colleagues: "Read the testimony of those who testified on the bill at hearings.

"Listen carefully to discussion on the floor. Be present at every session during debate on the bill and amendments.

"Go home and think it over.

"Use your own judgment, but vote like Americans."

ARMY MORALS

Telegrams and letters have been pouring into the War Department and to the Wisconsin senators from wives and mothers of the 32nd Division of the National Guard, about immoral conditions around Camp Beauregard, at Alexandria, La.

Wisconsin troops happen to be involved, and Louisiana happens to be the state complained of. But the situation has brought to a head a problem which exists in other states and with other troops.

This controversy between Wisconsin citizens and the War Department may become a national issue as the new selective service army of a million men moves into camps all over the country. A similar controversy already has developed regarding Jacksonville, Fla., and its neighboring Camp Blanding.

In the Louisiana situation, Wisconsin senators are demanding that the War Department remove three houses of prostitution near Camp Beauregard. But the War Department replies that it has no jurisdiction over the civil community outside camp limits. To this Senator Wiley has replied that the War Department should extend its jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, officials of Alexandria contend that their town is perfectly moral. War Department attitude is that the Army is not charged with moral reform of its recruits, and their conduct around a camp is likely to follow the same pattern as their conduct at home.

At the same time, experts of the Morale Division hope to hold men on the reservation, even in their spare time, by a well-planned recreation program, and by serving three-point-two beer. Beer of that strength is declared by law to be non-intoxicating, and the experts reason that if a man can get beer in camp, he is less likely to go to town looking for liquor.

The War Department also expects that Army life will prove rigorous for men out of civilian life, and there won't be much time or energy for idling.

Medical Facts and Oddities

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● Appropriate to the season is the historical note in the New York State Medical Journal, that the oldest prescription in the world is on a stone tablet of 3700 B.C., bearing directions for making an inhalant for treating a head cold. If you are going to outwit your invisible enemies, the germs, you must not be stupid and indulge in wishful thinking. Detection and early discovery of infection is a game of wits. The germ of tuberculosis is relentless but without wits. The human race has wits but is indolent, inclined to put things off, to comfort itself by saying "It's just a long-drawn-out cold" or "Those X-rays don't frighten me; they probably made a mistake; I'll let it go awhile." If you add your wits to the relentlessness of your enemy, he has no chance of survival.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

We frequently hear loud complaints that the ambulance didn't get there very fast and even when it did, the doctor didn't seem much concerned. Hear the ambulance doctor's side of the story. Here is a carefully tabulated record:

Ambulance Calls

One thousand three hundred calls were made by mistake, the lady thought she was phoning the laundry or something.

Two thousand one hundred and sixty-five—intoxication.

Three hundred and eighty-two calls because women fainted.

Five hundred and sixty-four—two other ambulances and three private doctors arrived at the same time.

Sixteen for aid for sick animals. Goldfish moulting. "We didn't mean to call ye, Doc. We got the cat out the tree O.K. but the taxpayer here says he wants to be sure it ain't hurt."

Thirteen for children with hives or eczema or a boil. Been sick, on the average, 48 hours.

Two for people suffering from heart attacks.

One for woman bleeding to death.

One for man drowning.

Twenty-six other legitimate reasons for call.

War and Human Growth

Sanders studied growth of groups of the population during the late war years—1918-1920 and subsequently showed a persistent failure to come up to the normal growth rate in all age groups up to 17 years.

Palmer, at Hagerstown, Maryland, measured elementary school children during the depression years, comparing their growth to similar groups in the prosperous years of 1921-1927. They were 8.7 per cent below comparable annual gains in the prosperity years. This was apparently not due to economic factors as the children seemed to be eating as much as normal.

There are undoubtedly good and poor years for growth in stature and body weight in people of the same age. Perhaps weather conditions are a more influential factor than economics.

Shuttleworth at Yale found in studying a group of girls that in 1924 they showed gains in stature averaging .26 centimeters above normal, while in 1925 they showed gains almost equally below normal, and in following years, annual variations.

Undoubtedly world economic conditions affect these growth periods, but so do other factors.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

W. L. S.—"What causes my 5-year-old boy to sneeze as soon as he goes to bed, during the night, and in the morning when he awakens? Will it prove harmful if nothing is done about it, and is there anything that can be done?"

Answer—The sneezing is probably a perfectly natural reaction. However, it might be due to adenoids or some obstruction in the nose. Why not consult a doctor who can examine the nose, and if his report is negative, stop worrying?

MURDER MAKES A HERO

BY ELLIOTT FILLION
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT

WHEN THE bridge was swept from its foundation, I was paralyzed with fear. I couldn't see how one person could escape from that welter of wind, rain and waves, yet, when the turmoil subsided, there they all were, safe on the shore.

Cary was stretched on the ground, and two of the troopers were unfasting the rope he had knotted around his waist. I came to life, splashed through the water and dropped on my knees by his side. Again fear was tearing at my heart. After all he had gone through, had that last effort been too much for him?

"Cary," I cried, "Cary!"

He opened his eyes, a wan smile stole over his face.

"I did it, Nancy. I'll never be afraid of the sea again." A pause, then: "Will you love me now?"

Love him? I worshiped him. Forgetting those about me, I slipped my arms around him and laid my face against his. I was the happiest woman in the world.

I don't remember much of the trip home. I know Cary, almost exhausted, rode Flame led by one of the troopers, that two of them carried Janet and two more carried Kaye, who, except for her weary tired smile, would have suffered more severely from the cold. Captain Lancy, strong hand beneath my elbow, walked by my side. And I? I cried softly to myself all the way home. Aren't women fools? With dry eyes we endure suffering, but overwhelming happiness always turns on the waterworks.

At Purple Beeches I had a hot bath, a hot drink and went to bed. At six o'clock Alice brought me a tray of delicious food and said that Captain Lancy was waiting for me in the library. She told me Robert, unable to maneuver the car by fallen trees, started to walk to Wetuxet, was struck by a falling tree limb and found unconscious by the detective, who safely made the trip to the village. Returning with the troopers, he met Alice, who sent him to the cove.

In the library I found every member of the Essex family, the three Rands, Captain Lancy and Chief Crane. As I entered, Captain Lancy began: "The case is ended. Greed and the fear of being compelled to restore money fraudulently obtained is the reason Mark Gould was killed in mistake for his cousin and—David Otis."

I gasped! Not at Bill Wing's name, I believed he was guilty even when the detective told me he had an alibi. But Dave Otis! How I had fooled myself. Kaye's voice rang out:

"I overheard them talking outside the shack last night. The beasts! Dave told Wing not to leave me for one minute, if the water rose higher, to break into one of the cottages on the ridge and take me there, but he got drunk and went off, leaving me locked in. I couldn't get out; Janet was trying to break down the door when Cary came. They got me out just as the shack started to tilt. I hope you hang them both!" she cried savagely.

Kaye, too, could not love where she could not respect. "Otis' punishment will be adequate," for he, unaided, killed Mark Gould. Early in the case, I decided that Mark was killed by mistake for Cary. First I concentrated on the Rands. Miss Rand was known to be at Rand House at 10-25, that left Mr. Rand and Proctor.

"No one was willing to reveal the family secret; but by sending Scott to consult marine records in Boston, I guessed it; a guess which was confirmed day before yesterday when Miss Nolan brought me two papers she found caught in the back of a drawer in Captain Essex's room. Undoubtedly, Mark put them there for safe keeping before he went downstairs expecting to search the grounds for an intruder. He was killed before he could remove them, which added to the mystery."

Proctor Rand cleverly gave the impression that he did not know the secret, but when told of his threat to Miss Gould I was convinced he did know it, which made me suspect him more strongly.

"I told him the night Althea tried to burn the papers," sheepishly confessed Rand.

"Miss Althea," continued the detective, "could not be the only person after the papers when Jabez was attacked by a man. I checked on Proctor and found he and Otis were playing poker in Wetuxet from nine o'clock in the evening until three the next morning, which eliminated both. Mrs. Gould's tale of Bill Wing's threat to her led me to him. He became angry and confused under my questioning, convincing me he was the burglar, but Mrs. Carl's testimony proved he could not be the murderer. In using Miss Althea's name, he pronounced it as written in the letter, yet he unhesitatingly spelled it correctly when asked to do so."

"The glue on the anonymous letter was that used in Proctor Rand's shop, but none of his products revealed the careful workmanship of the letter. He told me that the glue could not be obtained here and that he had given some to several persons, among them David Otis."

"No sane person would have risked entering a window at daylight to steal unimportant notes. Otis was the logical suspect. I searched his house, found the glue and samples of meticulous handiwork. When Chief Crane told me that Otis' father was a partner in Rand's Marine Underwriting company at the time of the sinking of the Gay Lady, I believed I had my man."

"Rand admitted that he and Frank Otis insured a worthless cargo on the Gay Lady, that Captain Essex III deliberately wrecked her, and that the insurance money was divided between them. Miss Althea, by eavesdropping, learned their plot and demanded her share, which her brother insured to her by a bequest in his will. The agreement was that, at her death, her estate was to go to Irene and Proctor Rand, a statement once published to Miss Deane," with a smile at me.

"The key to her brother's sea chest was left with Miss Althea, that she might destroy his papers if necessary, a plan defeated by the old captain's pertinacity."

"Wing, a seaman on the Gay Lady, became suspicious of certain happenings the night she sank. Later, he returned here and successfully blackmailed Rand for years. Rand, in a burst of fury, told Wing he would give him no more checks, for the old captain intended going over his son's papers and would certainly insist on restitution of the ill-gotten money. Wing determined to steal and destroy the papers. He spied on Purple Beeches many times, saw the papers put in the secret safe the night Miss Althea tried to burn them, later tried to open the safe, was discovered by Jabez and struck him over the head."

"Miss Gould naturally told Otis everything which took place here. He knew Proctor could not be concerned in the attempted burglary, but suspected his father. He went to him and explained his interest. Rand was surprised that Otis knew anything about the Gay Lady as 'Frank Otis' papers were supposed to be destroyed at his death. Young Otis' curiosity was greater than his loyalty, and when he found among his father's papers an envelope marked 'To be destroyed unread at his death,' he read what it contained."

"Rand told Otis the various developments, and Otis immediately suspected Wing. He went to him, and the first anonymous letter followed. By spelling Miss Althea's name with an 'r' he deliberately tried to throw suspicion upon Wing, and but for Wing's presence in Mrs. Carl's house at the time of the murder, he might have succeeded."

"Wing knew of the letters, but not the way Althea was spelled. He united with Otis to kidnap Miss Gould, but had he not yielded to temptation to drink, he would not have exposed her to danger. He is nearly insane with the knowledge that through him his son has lost his life."

"The night Miss Gould and Otis heard the cousins quarreling, Otis, knowing the secret, was able to understand the references which merely puzzled Miss Gould. He thought by killing Cary he could obtain the papers and prevent the old captain from learning the story. But instead of Cary it was Mark whom he killed."

"The case is ended, Chief Crane and I cannot see that any good will come from making the secret public. The underwriting company is out of existence; Horace Rand is the only living member of the conspiracy, and on him alone would fall the penalty. Mark Gould has been sacrificed to it, that is enough. Burn the papers, forget them and, smilingly he turned to Cary, 'take Miss Deane on a honeymoon. You've earned it.'"

Cary looked slightly confused, and I felt the hot color flame into my cheeks. Kaye's face lighted with its old mischievous smile.

"Take her to France, Cary," she said. "You don't need a bridge now."

Hear very little war talk these days and not nearly enough about the lend-lease bill before congress. I hope that is not entirely due to most of us deciding that the decision is up to congress alone. After all, it is our security and future that are in the balance and our money that will be spent. Soldiers back from training centers seem to think that we will be in the war before the finish and all of them are confident that we can take care of ourselves in a big way.

In the afternoon mail came a copy of "The Soviet Power, The Socialist Sixth of the World." Did take it home in the evening, intending to read and learn more about the Red side, but soon sickened of the goofy argument and gave the book a pitch, even though it is written by the Dean of Canterbury. With the book came a card from the American Council on Soviet Relations asking for clippings of reviews as well as personal comments on the book. Well, for what it is worth, here is the personal opinion: All that I read is lousy, and distribution of the book only would be permitted in a democracy that would be utterly destroyed by communism. I am unable to understand how a man of the cloth can support a movement that official records show regards the church as an enemy of itself and the people.

See that council is once more considering a building and plumbing code. Well, it is about time. We should have had that many years ago.

Medical Facts and Oddities

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
● Appropriate to the season is the historical note in the New York State Medical Journal, that the oldest prescription in the world is on a stone tablet of 3700 B.C., bearing directions for making an inhalant for treating a head cold. If you are going to outwit your invisible enemies, the germs, you must not be stupid and indulge in wishful thinking. Detection and early discovery of infection is a game of wits. The germ of tuberculosis is relentless but without wits. The human race has wits but is indolent, inclined to put things off, to comfort itself by saying "It's just a long-drawn-out cold" or "Those X-rays don't frighten me; they probably made a mistake; I'll let it go awhile." If you add your wits to the relentlessness of your enemy, he has no chance of survival.

We frequently hear loud complaints that the ambulance didn't get there very fast and even when it did, the doctor didn't seem much concerned. Hear the ambulance doctor's side of the story. Here is a carefully tabulated record:

- Ambulance Calls
One thousand three hundred calls were made by mistake, the lady thought she was phoning the laundry or something.
- Two thousand one hundred and sixty-five—intoxication.
- Three hundred and eighty-two calls because women fainted.
- Five hundred and sixty-four—two other ambulances and three private doctors arrived at the same time.
- Sixteen for aid for sick animals. Goldfish moulting. "We didn't mean to call you, Doc. We got the cat out the tree O.K. but the taxpayer here says he wants to be sure it ain't hurt."
- Thirteen for children with hives or eczema or a boil. Been sick, on the average, 48 hours.
- Two for people suffering from heart attacks.
- One for woman bleeding to death.
- One for man drowning.

MURDER MAKES A HERO

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT
WHEN THE bridge was swept from its foundation, I was paralyzed with fear. I couldn't see how one person could escape from that welter of wind, rain and waves, yet, when the turmoil subsided, there they all were, safe on the shore.
Cary was stretched on the ground, and two of the troopers were unfastening the rope he had knotted around his waist. I came to life, splashed through the water and dropped on my knees by his side. Again fear was tearing at my heart. After all he had gone through, had that last effort been too much for him?
"Cary," I cried. "Cary!"
He opened his eyes, a wan smile stole over his face.
"I did it, Nancy. I'll never be afraid of the sea again." A pause, then: "Will you love me now?"
Love him? I worshiped him. Forgetting those about me, I slipped my arms around him and laid my face against his. I was, the happiest woman in the world.
I don't remember much of the trip home. I know Cary, almost exhausted, rode Flame led by one of the troopers, that two of them carried Janet and two more carried Kaye, who, except for her heavy tweed suit, would have suffered more severely from the cold. Captain Lancy, strong hand beneath my elbow, walked by my side. And I? I cried softly to myself all the way home. Aren't women fools? With dry eyes we endure suffering, but overwhelming happiness always turns on the waterworks.
At Purple Beeches I had a hot bath, a hot drink and went to bed. At six o'clock Alice brought me a tray of delicious food and said that Captain Lancy was waiting for me in the library. She told me Robert, unable to maneuver the car by fallen trees, started to walk to Wetuxet, was struck by a falling tree limb and found unconscious by the detective, who safely made the trip to the village. Returning with the troopers, he met Alice, who sent him to the cove.
In the library I found every member of the Essex family, the three Rands, Captain Lancy and Chief Crane. As I entered, Captain Lancy began:
"The case is ended. Greed and the fear of being compelled to restore money fraudulently obtained is the reason Mark Gould was killed in mistake for his cousin. Two men are in jail, Bill Wing and—David Otis."
I gasped! Not at Bill Wing's name. I believed he was guilty even when the detective told me he had an alibi. But Dave Otis! How I had fooled myself. Kaye's voice rang out:
"I overheard them talking outside the shack last night. The beasts! Dave told Wing not to leave us for one minute, if the water rose higher, to break into one of the cottages on the ridge and take me there, but he got drunk and went off, leaving me locked in. I couldn't get out; Janet was trying to break down the door when Cary came. They got me out just as the shack started to tilt. I hope you hang them both!" she cried savagely.
Kaye, too, could not love where she could not respect.
Otis' punishment will be adequate," grimly returned Captain Lancy. "For he unaided, killed Mark Gould. Early in the case, I decided that Mark was killed by mistake for Cary. First I concentrated on the Rands. Miss Rand was known to be at Rand House at 10-25, that left Mr. Rand and Proctor."
"No one was willing to reveal the family secret; but by sending Scott to consult marine records in Boston, I guessed it; a guess which was confirmed day before yesterday when Miss Nolan brought me two papers she found caught in the back of a drawer in Captain Essex's room. Undoubtedly, Mark put them there for safe keeping before he went downstairs expecting to search the grounds for an intruder. He was killed before he could remove them, which added to the mystery."
"Proctor Rand cleverly gave the impression that he did not know the secret, but when told of his threat to Miss Gould I was convinced he did know it, which made me suspect him more strongly."
"I told him the night Althea tried to burn the papers," sheepishly confessed Rand.
"Miss Althea," continued the detective, "could not be the only person after the papers when Jabez was attacked by a man. I checked on Proctor and found he and Otis were playing poker in Wetuxet from nine o'clock in the evening until three the next morning, which eliminated them both. Mrs. Gould's tale of Bill Wing's threat to her led me to him. He became angry and confused under my questioning, convincing me he was the burglar, but Mrs. Carl's testimony proved he could not be the murderer. In using Miss Althea's name, he pronounced it as written in the letter, yet he unhesitatingly spelled it correctly when asked to do so."
"The glue on the anonymous letter was that used in Proctor Rand's shop, but none of his products revealed the careful workmanship of the letter. He told me that the glue could not be obtained here and that he had given some to several persons, among them David Otis."
"No sane person would have risked entering a window at night to steal unimportant notes. Otis was the logical suspect. I searched his house, found the glue and samples of meticulous handiwork. When Chief Crane told me that Otis' father was a partner in Rand's Marine Underwriting company at the time of the sinking of the Gay Lady, I believed I had my man."
"Rand admitted that he and Frank Otis insured a worthless cargo on the Gay Lady, that Captain Essex III deliberately wrecked her, and that the insurance money was divided between them. Miss Althea, by eavesdropping, learned their plot and demanded her share, which her brother insured to her by a bequest in his will. The agreement was that, at his death, her estate was to go to Irene and Proctor Rand, a statement once puzzling to Miss Deane," with a smile at me.
"The key to her brother's sea chest was left with Miss Althea, that she might destroy his papers if necessary, a plan defeated by the old captain's perversity."
"Wing, a seaman on the Gay Lady, became suspicious of certain happenings the night she sank. Later, he returned here and successfully blackmailed Rand for years. Rand, in a burst of fury, told Wing he would give him no more checks, for the old captain intended going over his son's papers and would certainly insist on restitution of the ill-gotten money. Wing determined to steal and destroy the papers. He spied on Purple Beeches many times, saw the papers put in the secret safe the night Miss Althea tried to burn them, later tried to open the safe, was discovered by Jabez and struck him over the head."
"Miss Gould naturally told Otis everything which took place here. He knew Proctor could not be concerned in the attempted burglary, but suspected his father. He went to him and explained his interest. Rand was surprised that Otis knew anything about the Gay Lady as Frank Otis' papers were supposed to be destroyed at his death. Young Otis' curiosity was greater than his loyalty, and when he found among his father's papers an envelope marked 'To be destroyed unread at my death,' he read what it contained."
"Rand told Otis the various developments, and Otis immediately suspected Wing. He went to him, and the first anonymous letter followed. By spelling Miss Althea's name with an 'r' he deliberately tried to throw suspicion upon Wing, and but for Wing's presence in Mrs. Carl's house at the time of the murder, he might have succeeded."
"Wing knew of the letters, but not the way Althea was spelled. He united with Otis to kidnap Miss Gould, but had he not yielded to temptation to drink, he would not have exposed her to danger. He is nearly insane with the knowledge that through him his son has lost his life."
"The night Miss Gould and Otis heard the cousins quarrelling, Otis, knowing the secret, was able to understand the references which merely puzzled Miss Gould. He thought by killing Cary he could obtain the papers and prevent the old captain from learning the story. But instead of Cary it was Mark who he killed."
"The case is ended. Chief Crane and I cannot see that any good will come from making the secret public. The underwriting company is out of existence; Horace Rand is the only living member of the conspiracy, and on him alone would fall the penalty. Mark Gould has been sacrificed to it, that is enough. Burn the papers, forget them and," smilingly he turned to Cary, "take Miss Deane on a honeymoon. You've earned it."
Cary looked slightly confused, and I felt the hot color flame into my cheeks. Kaye's face lighted with its old mischievous smile.
"Take her to France, Cary," she said. "You don't need a bridge now."

The near twenty-five members in each of the two orchestras, Walnut and Ashville, under direction of Miss Reber and Mr. Brobst respectively, and "Red Hines" half hundred musicians in the Veterans-War band, are re- ceiving at lot more than just learning to play a tune. When we and Hitler get full charge, every school child who can whistle a tune or sing a song will be taught to play a musical instrument. And we are meaning just this. The grade school youngsters from Madison, Duval and South Bloom- field did fine with their songs and playlets. Gretchen Plum and Elsa Shell in charge.

The state speaker, Mr. White and Mrs. Steva are at Derby today with their institute vares. James Swearingen, here at the local in- stitute, told us that he is attending them all and enjoys it. HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches, people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of tak- ing excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Fre- quent or scanty passages with a burning and stinging sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poison- ous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Fre- quent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poison- ous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

BERLIN, Feb. 6—Eighteen British planes and three German machines have been shot down during the last 24 hours, it was announced in Berlin today.

The German high command said that during yesterday's RAF attack on Calais four British Hurricane fighters and nine Spitfires were shot down in an aerial combat. One British Blenheim bomber, two Spitfires and one British aircraft of unidentified type were destroyed by anti-aircraft fire, the war communiqué added.

One other RAF plane was shot down "elsewhere," the announcement said.

RAF planes attacked Newport and Ypres as well as channel coastal points, it was stated, but caused no material damage.

A 3,000-ton steamer was sunk and another freighter set afire in air attacks on the Thames Estuary, and a third merchantman was blasted out of control 280 miles west of Ireland, a communiqué said.

German air attacks last night were concentrated on southeast England, and "numerous fires broke out among port establishments in a coast town," said the bulletin.

FISCHER TALKS OF CITY SCHOOLS' DEFENSE WORK

Discussing problems of city schools at the Rotary Club luncheon meet Thursday noon in the American Hotel Hurricane, Superintendent Frank Fischer pointed to the school's National Defense training program as one which would benefit not only those enrolled in it but the community and school system as well.

Classes in drafting and welding will be ready to start next Monday or Tuesday, he told Rotarians, with 35 men enrolled. Classes will be held six hours each evening for a period of three months.

Superintendent Fischer pointed out that he believed the program would pave the way for better equipment for city schools. Despite public criticism of conditions at the High Street School, the superintendent said facilities there satisfactory.

Conditions at Franklin Street School, however, are a disgrace to every citizen of Circleville," he said.

Ned Stout, first class scout from the First Methodist troop, was present at the meeting and talked briefly on the significance and purpose of the scouting program. He appeared as a local representative of the Boy Scouts of America, which organization celebrates its 31st anniversary next week.

said, "will lie on those who send our arms abroad."

Explaining his warning not to "stretch the American neck across the Atlantic," he asserted that "if we follow the policy represented in this bill, we will find ourselves with England as a bridgehead in Europe."

"If we establish such a bridgehead, we must make every effort to maintain it," he continued. In that, as I say, I do not see how we can maintain it . . .

Transport Problem

"If England is able to hold out several years . . . we can almost certainly equal or exceed the air strength of Germany. But then we would be confronted with the problem of transporting that air strength to the British Isles."

Planes might be flown across, he said, but oil and supplies would have to go by sea, thus placing "ourselves in the position of having our aviation forces in England dependent on sea lanes within easy bombing range of our enemy's aircraft."

Then Lindbergh pointed out that "we have another bridgehead in the Philippines."

"Thus," he argued, "if we follow out the policy represented in this bill, we will have to maintain and protect supply lines which stretch two thirds of the way around the world, and which end in positions exposed to attack by the most powerful nations of Europe and Asia."

"This would be an audacious undertaking even if your nation were fully prepared for war. But we are not prepared for war . . ."

Prolonging War

Declaring that there must be no depletion of "even the small defense forces that we have now," he charged that the bill if passed would make the United States "responsible for futilely prolonging the war and adding to the bloodshed and devastation in Europe, particularly among the democracies."

He flatly stated: "I oppose placing our security in an English victory because I believe that such a victory is extremely doubtful."

"I am opposed to this bill because I believe it endorses a policy that will lead to failure in war, and to conditions in our own country as bad or worse than those we now desire to overthrow in Nazi Germany."

He scoffed at dangers of actual invasion.

"I do not believe," he insisted, "that the danger to America lies from an invasion from abroad. I believe that it lies from an invasion here at home in our own midst, and that it is exemplified by the terms of this bill—the placing of our own security in the success of foreign armies and the removal of power from the representatives of the people of our own land."

Lindbergh explained he opposed the bill for two reasons.

"I oppose it first, because I believe that it is a step away from the system of government in which most of us in this country believe," he stated, "secondly, I oppose it because I think it is a policy that will weaken rather than strengthen our nation."

The first reason he dismissed in nine words.

"It is simply my opinion as an American citizen," he said.

But he went into great length to support his second conclusion.

He added that aviation made modern war "materialistic and must be met with material measures."

Shouldn't Control Outcome

"And here," he continued, "I would like to say that I have never taken the stand that it makes no difference to use who wins this war in Europe. It does make a difference, a great difference. But I do not believe that it is either possible or desirable for us in America to control the outcome of European wars. When I am asked which side I would like to win, it would be very easy for me to say 'the English.'"

It was at this point he said that he preferred a negotiated peace. He added:

"The policy of 'depleting our own forces to aid England is based on the assumption that England will win this war. Personally, I do not believe that England is in a that case, the only advantage we can gain by our action lies in whatever additional time we obtain to prepare ourselves for defense."

"But instead of consolidating our own defensive position in America, we are sending a large portion of our armament production abroad. In the case of aviation, for instance, we have sent most of it, yet our own air forces are in deplorable condition for lack of modern equipment. The majority of planes we now have are obsolescent on the standards of modern warfare."

"And, this bill even authorizes the transfer of equipment that our air forces now possess. From the standpoint of aviation, at least, I believe that this policy weakens our security in America."

He recalled his study of Euro-

Brother Groundhog looked at Circleville's weather chart Thursday, then at the weatherman and would have laughed up his sleeve if he had one, because temperatures were in the mid-thirties and his last Sunday's prophecy that spring was practically here at least was more accurate than his rival's, who said it was going to get colder.

Although temperatures Wednesday rose only to 35, they dropped by one degree during the night and promised to stay above freezing during the day.

The weatherman is determined to get even, however, and says it will be colder Friday.

FISCHER TALKS OF CITY SCHOOLS' DEFENSE WORK

Discussing problems of city schools at the Rotary Club luncheon meet Thursday noon in the American Hotel Hurricane, Superintendent Frank Fischer pointed to the school's National Defense training program as one which would benefit not only those enrolled in it but the community and school system as well.

Classes in drafting and welding will be ready to start next Monday or Tuesday, he told Rotarians, with 35 men enrolled. Classes will be held six hours each evening for a period of three months.

Superintendent Fischer pointed out that he believed the program would pave the way for better equipment for city schools. Despite public criticism of conditions at the High Street School, the superintendent said facilities there satisfactory. Conditions at Franklin Street School, however, are a disgrace to every citizen of Circleville," he said.

Ned Stout, first class scout from the First Methodist troop, was present at the meeting and talked briefly on the significance and purpose of the scouting program. He appeared as a local representative of the Boy Scouts of America, which organization celebrates its 31st anniversary next week.

Explaining his warning not to "stretch the American neck across the Atlantic," he asserted that "if we follow the policy represented in this bill, we will find ourselves with England as a bridgehead in Europe."

"If we establish such a bridgehead, we must make every effort to maintain it," he continued. In that, as I say, I do not see how we can maintain it...

Transport Problem

"If England is able to hold out several years... we can almost certainly equal or exceed the air strength of Germany. But then we would be confronted with the problem of transporting that air strength to the British Isles." Planes might be flown across, he said, but oil and supplies would have to go by sea, thus placing "ourselves in the position of having our aviation forces in England dependent on sea lanes within easy bombing range of our enemy's aircraft."

Then Lindbergh pointed out that "we have another bridgehead in the Philippines."

"Thus," he argued, "if we follow out the policy represented in this bill, we will have to maintain and protect supply lines which stretch two thirds of the way around the world, and which end in positions exposed to attack by the most powerful nations of Europe and Asia."

"This would be an audacious undertaking even if your nation were fully prepared for war. But we are not prepared for war..."

Prolonging War

Declaring that there must be no depletion of "even the small defense forces that we have now," he charged that the bill if passed would make the United States "responsible for futilely prolonging the war and adding to the bloodshed and devastation in Europe, particularly among the democracies."

He flatly stated: "I oppose placing our security in an English victory because I believe that such a victory is extremely doubtful."

"I am opposed to this bill because I believe it endorses a policy that will lead to failure in war, and to conditions in our own country as bad or worse than those we now desire to overthrow in Nazi Germany."

He scoffed at dangers of actual invasion.

"I do not believe," he insisted, "that the danger to America lies from an invasion from abroad. I believe that it lies from an invasion here at home in our own midst, and that it is exemplified by the terms of this bill—the placing of our own security in the success of foreign armies and the removal of power from the representatives of the people of our own land."

Lindbergh explained he opposed the bill for two reasons.

"I oppose it first, because I believe that it is a step away from the system of government in which most of us in this country believe," he stated, "secondly, I oppose it because I think it is a policy that will weaken rather than strengthen our nation."

The first reason he dismissed in nine words.

"It is simply my opinion as an American citizen," he said.

But he went into great length to support his second conclusion. He added that aviation made modern war "materialistic and must be met with material measures."

Shouldn't Control Outcome

"And here," he continued, "I would like to say that I have never taken the stand that it makes no difference to use who wins this war in Europe. It does make a difference, a great difference. But I do not believe that it is either possible or desirable for us in America to control the outcome of European wars. When I am asked which side I would like to win, it would be very easy for me to say 'the English.'"

It was at this point he said that he preferred a negotiated peace.

"The policy of 'depleting our own forces to aid England is based on the assumption that England will win this war. Personally, I do not believe that England is in a that case, the only advantage we can gain by our action lies in whatever additional time we obtain to prepare ourselves for defense."

"But instead of consolidating our own defensive position in America, we are sending a large portion of our armament production abroad. In the case of aviation, for instance, we have sent most of it, yet our own air forces are in deplorable condition for lack of modern equipment. The majority of planes we now have are obsolescent on the standards of modern warfare."

"And, this bill even authorizes the transfer of equipment that our air forces now possess. From the standpoint of aviation, at least, I believe that this policy weakens our security in America."

He recalled his study of Euro-

TEMPERATURES REMAIN IN MIDDLE THIRTY READINGS

Brother Groundhog looked at Circleville's weather chart Thursday, then at the weatherman and would have laughed up his sleeve if he had one, because temperatures were in the mid-thirties and his last Sunday's prophecy that spring was practically here at least was more accurate than his rival's, who said it was going to get colder.

Although temperatures Wednesday rose only to 35, they dropped by one degree during the night and promised to stay above freezing during the day.

The weatherman is determined to get even, however, and says it will be colder Friday.

HIGH TRIBUNAL TO STAMP OKEH ON DRAFT BILL

Army And Navy Confident
That Any Test Of Act
Will Be Fruitless

PRECEDENT IS CITED

Dykstra Expects Some To
Be Filed Protesting
Federal Statute

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Legal authorities of the Army and Navy are confident that the Supreme Court will uphold constitutionality of the Conscription Act, although the question of peace-time conscription has not been tested.

Searching for legal precedents, Army and Navy lawyers have found expressions of the Supreme Court on the power to strengthen the national defense, which convince them that the court will approve the law.

Suits already have been started in lower federal courts to test the Burke-Wadsworth Act. A test case may be rushed so that the High Court can decide it before it adjourns for the summer in June.

The court approved the Selective Service Act of 1917, but because the World War in progress some lawyers debate its value as a precedent.

Leslie C. McNemar, lieutenant-commander in the Naval Reserve, has submitted a brief on legal questions to the House Military Affairs Committee in which he asserts the Act is clearly valid.

Cites World War Precedent

He pointed out that the ink was scarcely dry on the World War Draft Act before it was attacked. A test case was rushed to the Supreme Court with remarkable speed. A decision was handed down July 10, 1917, less than two months after the Act was approved.

"It should be remarked that there does not appear to be any longer any question as to the constitutionality of such legislation, that having been clearly decided by the Supreme Court in the Selective Draft Act cases," said McNemar in his brief.

"While the question of conscription in time of peace has never been presented before the Supreme Court, a similar question was presented as to the right of the United States in time of peace to prepare for the common defense in time of war in the case of Ashwander against Tennessee Valley Authority.

"The court stated: 'The Wilson Dam and its auxiliary plants, including the hydro-electric power plant, are, and were intended to be, adapted to the purposes of national defense.'

Substance of Ruling

"It was held in the above case that the law authorizing the building of this dam was constitutional and within the power conferred upon Congress to perfect the National Defense of the United States. There are numerous other decisions of the Supreme Court which bear upon the general question of its sovereign powers, and hold that the United States has and is authorized to exercise in its dealing with foreign nations and for purposes of national defense all the sovereign powers which any other state may possess."

The Military Affairs Committee, however, has before it a brief submitted by Malcolm M. Young, Durham, N. C., attacking the Draft Act as unconstitutional.

"This is the first time in American constitutional history that peace-time military conscription has been seriously considered," he said. "Whether Congress can draft men without a prior declaration of war is now a moot question."

"It is the position of this brief that the Burke-Wadsworth Bill should be held unconstitutional. In limiting the question to unconstitutionality I am not waiving any objections of bad policy militarily not of infringement of civil liberties and right of conscience."

"The power to conscript during war has usually been upheld by cases decided during war but historical sources indicate the origin of the so-called power to conscript men for wartime military duty under the American Constitution is extremely doubtful."

He summarized his constitutional objections as follows:

"The extension of power to the President, without a prior declaration of war, to induct civilians by conscription into the Army or Navy is unconstitutional because it gives the President emergency powers which he does not possess."

"This extension of power was jealously guarded by the common law and should therefore be expressed with utmost caution by any legislative body."

"Executive military action even in war is subject to severe legal criticism."

"Congress has the power to raise, but not conscript, armies during peace."

Points To Constitution

Young declared that there is no clause in the constitution upon which peace-time draft power can be predicated. The President, he asserted cannot constitutionally exercise powers under the draft without a declaration of war.

"Heretofore," he said, "all such legislation has been preceded by war or rebellion, as under Civil War law and the World War Draft Act."

Dr. Clarence Dykstra, Director of Selective Service, expects many cases to be started against the law and its various provisions. There was a veritable deluge of cases after the World War Act was passed, his records show, involving not only the main question as to constitutionality of conscription as a whole but various lesser provisions of the act such as those involving religious liberty.

HIGH TRIBUNAL TO STAMP OKEH ON DRAFT BILL

Army And Navy Confident
That Any Test Of Act
Will Be Fruitless

PRECEDENT IS CITED

Dykstra Expects Some To
Be Filed Protesting
Federal Statute

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Legal authorities of the Army and Navy are confident that the Supreme Court will uphold constitutionality of the Conscription Act, although the question of peace-time conscription has not been tested.

Searching for legal precedents, Army and Navy lawyers have found expressions of the Supreme Court on the power to strengthen the national defense, which convince them that the court will approve the law.

Suits already have been started in lower federal courts to test the Burke-Wadsworth Act. A test case may be rushed so that the High Court can decide it before it adjourns for the summer in June.

The court approved the Selective Service Act of 1917, but because the World War was in progress some lawyers debate its value as a precedent.

Leslie C. McNemar, lieutenant-commander in the Naval Reserve, has submitted a brief on legal questions to the House Military Affairs Committee in which he asserts the Act is clearly valid.

Cites World War Precedent

He pointed out that the ink was scarcely dry on the World War Draft Act before it was attacked. A test case was rushed to the Supreme Court with remarkable speed. A decision was handed down July 10, 1917, less than two months after the Act was approved.

"It should be remarked that there does not appear to be any longer any question as to the constitutionality of such legislation, that having been clearly decided by the Supreme Court in the Selective Draft Act cases," said McNemar in his brief.

"While the question of conscription in time of peace has never been presented before the Supreme Court, a similar question was presented as to the right of the United States in time of peace to prepare for the common defense in time of war in the case of Ashwander against Tennessee Valley Authority."

"The court stated: 'The Wilson Dam and its auxiliary plants, including the hydro-electric power plant, are, and were intended to be, adapted to the purposes of national defense.'"

Substance of Ruling

"It was held in the above case that the law authorizing the building of this dam was constitutional and within the power conferred upon Congress to perfect the National Defense of the United States. There are numerous other decisions of the Supreme Court which bear upon the general question of its sovereign powers, and hold that the United States has and is authorized to exercise in its dealing with foreign nations and for purposes of national defense all the sovereign powers which any other state may possess."

The Military Affairs Committee, however, has before it a brief submitted by Malcolm M. Young, Durham, N. C., attacking the Draft Act as unconstitutional.

"This is the first time in American constitutional history that peace-time military conscription has been seriously considered," he said. "Whether Congress can draft men without a prior declaration of war is now a moot question."

"It is the position of this brief that the Burke-Wadsworth Bill should be held unconstitutional. In limiting the question to unconstitutionality I am not waiving any objections of bad policy militarily not of infringement of civil liberties and right of conscience."

"The power to conscript during war has usually been upheld by cases decided during war but historical sources indicate the origin of the so-called power to conscript men for wartime military duty under the American Constitution is extremely doubtful."

He summarized his constitutional objections as follows:

"The extension of power to the President, without a prior declaration of war, to induct civilians by conscription into the Army or Navy is unconstitutional because it gives the President emergency powers which he does not possess."

"This extension of power was jealously guarded by the common law and should therefore be expressed with utmost caution by any legislative body."

"Executive military action even in war is subject to severe legal criticism."

"Congress has the power to raise, but not conscript, armies during peace."

Points To Constitution

Young declared that there is no clause in the constitution upon

Fuehrer Jailed

G. Wilhelm Knuze, successor of Fritz Kuhn, now in prison, as fuehrer of the German-American Bund, and eight of his followers have been sentenced to terms of 12-14 months at hard labor in the New Jersey state prison after conviction on charges of violating the state law against speeches inciting religious and racial hatreds.

which peace-time draft power can be predicated. The President, he asserted cannot constitutionally exercise powers under the draft without a declaration of war.

"Heretofore," he said, "all such legislation has been preceded by war or rebellion, as under Civil War law and the World War Draft Act."

Dr. Clarence Dykstra, Director of Selective Service, expects many cases to be started against the law and its various provisions. There was a veritable deluge of cases after the World War Act was passed, his records show, involving not only the main question as to constitutionality of conscription as a whole but various lesser provisions of the act such as those involving religious liberty.

34 OF COUNTY'S YOUTHS LEAVE FOR ARMY TASK

Largest Contingent Travels To Fort Hayes For Examinations

KELLSTADT IS LEADER

Five More To Leave Next Wednesday; 53,000 To Be In By June 1.

Thirty-four volunteers, Pickaway County's second and largest contingent, left Circleville shortly after 7:45 a. m. Thursday for Fort Hayes, Columbus.

At Fort Hayes they will be given physical examinations and those who pass will be inducted into service. Most of them will go to Camp Shelby, Miss., Selective Service officials believe.

Even before daylight Thursday, the volunteers began to assemble at the Court House, some with suit cases, some with boxes, containing personal articles which will be needed when they get to camp. At 7:15 all 34 had arrived, were taken into the court room for their final instructions, handed in their induction papers, and chose William Kellstadt as their leader.

The next contingent from the county will leave next Wednesday, the quota being set at five. The third call will include Robert Cormany Black, Ashville; Henry Hale Muncie, Canal Winchester; Howard James Edgington, Circleville; Russell William Streets, Circleville, and Millard Fraley, Jr., Circleville.

The first Negro youth to be called into service will be Harrison Hill, 217 West Huston Street, who will go to Fort Hayes on February 20.

Earl Hussey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hussey, 373 Watt Street, left Wednesday for Camp Shelby, Miss., with a group of selectees from Columbus. Hussey volunteered and has registered in Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6 — More than 53,000 Ohioans, including 29,825 peace-time conscriptees, will be in the nation's armed forces by June 1, just seven months after federal mobilization and selective service began, Adj. Gen. Gilson D. Light estimated today.

The conscriptees will include 14,700 men who will be called beginning March 2 in the fifth, sixth and seventh calls of the draft. The 700 will be Negroes.

It was also announced that aides would be appointed in each of the state's 22 congressional districts to stimulate recruiting for the U. S. Army Air Corps. Twelve of them were named yesterday, including Eugene Dutro, Zanesville; J. R. Harrington, Mansfield; Paul M. Perkins, Canton; Felix Winewald, Cleveland, and Judge Dudley M. Outcalt and David R. Wood, of Cincinnati.

NO FAVORITISM IN ARMY
FORD ORL, Cal.—A marching example of the fact that favoritism doesn't rule the army is Stuart B. Marshall Jr., 21, nephew of the U. S. Army Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall. Marshall, who enlisted three years ago in Washington, is serving his second hitch as a lowly private first class in the First Medical Regiment, stationed at Ford Ord.
